What's Happening?

By Julie Pentis

Last month, we decided to try something a little different for our meeting. We thought we'd give people a chance to take a study break and get their minds off of finals, so instead of bringing in a speaker, we played games...related to human resources of course!

First, we played a survival game: After surviving a terrible plane crash in shark-infested waters, teams had to choose who to put on the life raft. Each survivor's name and profile was given to us, and we used problem-solving and teamwork skills to decide on which four people we would save.

Next, we played a gift-wrapping game: We were split up in pairs and our hands were tied together with ribbon. We were given wrapping paper, tape, scissors, and a box, and each pair had to work together to wrap their box. Each box was very unique! There were winners in three categories:

- Fastest time
- Most creative
- Best-looking

Winners all received CAHR T-shirts. Through this activity we demonstrated teamwork, cooperation, and creativity.

And, of course, we all enjoyed some pizza while we played. It was a lot of fun!
